

Lucy is a 12 year mission to visit many of the Trojan asteroids. Lucy will be the first space mission to study the Trojans. The mission takes its name from the fossilized human ancestor (called "Lucy" by her discoverers) whose skeleton provided unique insight into humanity's evolution. Likewise, the Lucy mission will revolutionize our knowledge of planetary origins and the formation of our solar system.

The swarms of Trojan asteroids associated with Jupiter are considered Time capsules from the birth of our Solar System more than 4 billion years ago. They are thought to be remnants of the primordial material that formed the outer planets. The Trojans orbit the Sun in two loose groups, with one group leading ahead of Jupiter in its path, the other trailing behind.
