The Atlas V, currently in service, was developed by Lockheed Martin as part of the US Air Force Evolved Expendable Launch Vehicle (EELV) program. The first was launched on August 21, 2002. In 2006, operation was transferred to United Launch Alliance (ULA), a joint-venture between Lockheed Martin and Boeing. Lockheed Martin continues to market the Atlas V to commercial customers. Atlas V is built in Decatur, Alabama and maintains two launch sites: Space Launch Complex 41 at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station and Space Launch Complex 3-E at Vandenberg Air Force Base in California.

The launch of Payload 101 for the National Reconnaissance Office will utilize the heavy-lift Atlas V booster rocket in the 531 configuration with a five foot diameter fairing, 3 Solid Rocket Boosters on the vehicle's first stage, and a single engine Centaur upper stage to propel the secret NROL-101 payload to it's classified, assigned orbit. The text along the bottom of the mission emblem says "Goodness persists" rendered in JRR Tolkien's Elvish tengwar language from "The Lord of the Rings".
