that the positive cash flow from selling satellite internet services would be useful to fund SpaceX plans for Mars.
The launch will be from Space Launch Complex 39A at the Kennedy Space Center. The first stage of the Falcon 9 booster is expected to land on a barge in the Atlantic Ocean off Charleston SC. The landing will be too far to see from launch viewing areas, though the upper atmosphere re-entry burns might be visible about 6-1/2 to 7 minutes after launch above the Northeast horizon.

Multiple satellites launched on a Falcon 9

2021-05-15 6:54 pmEDT

Space Exploration Technologies Corp, known around the world as SpaceX, is launching its next 'batch' of Internet Broadband satellites.
This launch of only 53 Starlink satellites is being taken out of numeric order, so this launch of Starlink Satellites following Starlink 27, is designated Starlink 26. Many of these satellites will include some inter-satellite communications among satellites in the constellation. Inter-satellite laser comm links will allow faster internet connections without multiple 'hops' via ground stations. There are currently more than 1,600 Starlink Satellites in orbit, with more on the way.
Besides the Starlink Satellites, SpaceX is launching satellites for other paying customers. A Capella Synthetic Aperture Radar (SAR) satellite, and Tyvak-0130 are also on the Manifest.
SpaceX has articulated the explicit goal of providing broadband internet connectivity to underserved areas of the Earth with its Starlink program, as well as to provide competitively-priced, low latency service to urban areas. Moreover, SpaceX has indicated
